Silent auction

Dear Editor:

Now that all proceeds are finally in hand from our Tea and Silent Auction of Aug. 7, 1976, the Altrusa Club of the Monterey Peninsula would like to warmly thank the following business firms of Carmel for their fine contributions that helped to insure the success of this, our major fund-raising event each year: Antiques and Accents, Arts Designs, Books Inc., Ellie's Hayloft, Fireside Gallery, Raffles, Richardson's Strawberry Patch, United Nations Center, Village Hardware.

With a meeting for a final review and accounting of the Tea and Silent Auction, and a program meeting featuring an architectural consultant to the handicapped as our speaker, we can now assure the community that your support will result in substantial continuing assistance to the handicapped and aged, as plans are well under way. Again, thanks to you all.

Sunset problem

Dear Editor:

The "problem" of what to do with Sunset will be no problem at all when we get three or more city council members dedicated to preserving the historic community uses of the property.

The first Sunset Commission set out nearly twelve years ago to deliberately downgrade the community uses of Sunset and its grounds, letting the ball-field and the gym deteriorate badly.

The philosophy of our present Cultural Commission is exactly the same as that followed by everyone of its predecessors, namely to eliminate Sunset's community uses.

This present commission needs a strong charge from our city council to retain and repair both Sunset's gym as a gym, and Carmel's only city-owned play-field, Sunset's north play-field, as a play-field.

If a fresh, new charge to our Cultural Commission fails to turn their philosophy around, the Cultural Commission should be abolished.

Many of our newer residents must be told by someone that we Carmelites had a wonderful community center going strong at Sunset long before we heard of a "Cultural Commission" with a hired "Cultural Director".

Shuttle buses

Dear Editor:

The last council meeting at the Sunset Center was interesting and of much concern to me as a resident of Carmel.

I fully realize the importance of "visitors" to our city. "Visitors," to my way of thinking are people who usually spend at least one full day and a night at a hotel or motel, shop casually, enjoy the beauty and charm of the area, and just relax!

I am opposed to the influx of the "four-hour tourists," arriving by the bus load (like cattle), looking for restrooms, junk shops and hot dogs.

Perhaps Carmel needs some of these tourists. I'm not condemning them as a whole, they do spend a limited amount of money here. My main objection is the heavy inflow of large, diesel type buses into the downtown areas, disgorging people at Ocean and Junipero in mid morning and loading again in mid afternoon or sooner for departure.

A suggestion to possibly correct this "horror" might be to consider parking the buses as the Rnacho Shopping Center, or close by! There appear to be ample parking facilities in this area (local merchants down there would welcome this plan).

In order to move the passengers into Carmel, why not think about a form of shuttle service, at say 25 cents each way for adults, 15 cents for youngsters four to 12 years of age, no charge for children under 4 years?

Use of buses owned by the Carmel Motor Car Co. (Historical Tours of Carmel) might be a solution, thereby giving this local enterprise added income (tourists to pay the fare, of course).

It's just a thought that might be worthwhile exploring.

Dominion

Dear Editor:

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. Genesis 2:26. Dominion? — No Way.

Sunset gym

Dear Editor:

Once again, we are in danger of losing the Sunset gym. Opposition to this facility appears to be based on the idea that it is not in keeping with the concept of a Cultural Center.

Why can this concept not include physical culture? Many of the artists and writers who helped to found Carmel, such as Jack London, George Sterling, and Jimmy Hopper were terrific athletes. Their community life style was based on the classical Greek ideal of a sound mind and body. My mother, who was born here in 1914, played first base on the Abalone League, and was a champion swimmer, tennis player, and horsewoman (old timers will remember her as Sis Reamer).

As an artist (my wife Mary and I are featured at the Village Artistry) I appreciate the chance to work out at the Sunset gym, and believe that my artwork is the better for it. Malcolm Moran, Clint Eastwood, and Bing Crosby have contributed financially. Chief Ellis and George Du Bets have devoted their time and energy. Because of their efforts and those of many others, Carmel now has the best equipped facility of its kind within 100 miles. It is the only gym within walking distance of the children here in town that offers basketball, weight training, and boxing programs (my nine year old uses it, too).

It would be a real loss to do away with what has been built-up over the past six years. The Sunset gym is very much in keeping with the concept of culture envisioned by the founders of Carmel. Little enough of their life style remains. Let us retain what little we have left.

Once upon a time...

by Frank Lloyd

The time is 1959 and on Friday, September 18, of that year a banner news headline read: Campbell New Municipal Judge. The Peninsula also received its first drenching rain of the season on that date, just ahead of the Equinox.

It was a wonderful time: Nikita Krushchev was over here and planned a whistle stop in Salinas as the Sheraton-Palace hotel in San Francisco was preparing to lay a $50,000 gold service for a banquet in his honor, although Mr. K. was staying at the Mark.

As usual, Mr. K. was "blowing his stack," Krushchev was, and Washington as usual was "puzzled."

But the new Judge Campbell quietly graced a reception in his honor which was held at the Casa Munras in Monterey.

To remember Gordy when he first came to Carmel at the age of four is to recall two chubby youngsters and a most beautiful mother, and the little pre-cut house they then lived in modestly opposite Sunset grammar school on San Carlos Street. The father was a struggling young lawyer from San Jose.

The second small boy was his small brother Johnny, who completed the family of Argyl Campbell. The kids grew up to attend Sunset and later Monterey high, where they shone in athletics. Gordy was then on a team in every sport.

Meanwhile his illustrious father was city attorney concurrently (or should it be simultaneously?) for Carmel, Monterey, Pacific Grove and Soledad, and was busy organizing the Monterey sardine boat owners' association.

Gordy himself carried his athletic prowess on to Menlo, where he was a basketball captain and a baseball star. While at Stanford he became first string quarterback under Pop Warner, with Ernie Nevers coaching the backfield, and was second in the batting order on the baseball team. He was on several All-Coast football teams and wound all this up in 1932 and went on to Oregon State for law studies.

Then, in 1938, he was appointed U.S. Attorney General.

I can remember riding from what is now the Jade Tree Inn down to the beach without going through anyone's yard and it was beautiful. It would be unrealistic to think that it was going to stay that way, but it's a far cry from the way it is now. I really think there has been a little more development than has been desirable.

"I think considering the tremendously rapid rate of growth of Carmel the last few years, it's not going to harm to have a little breather, to try to take stock of ourselves and see just where we're going."

Helen Arnold wants to 'maintain' Carmel

By MICHAEL BUTOWITSCH

Helen Arnold is somewhat taken aback by the suddenness with which she's been catapulted into the public limelight but feels compelled to help "maintain" Carmel. Though she cherishes fond memories of raising her children in the village, the future concerns her now.

She admires Carmel for "a strong feeling on the part of the people to maintain it as they knew it," and says she hopes to reflect that feeling as a City Council member. But her first decision in office wasn't an easy one. In an interview last week she discussed her vote on the mayoralty and problems that face Carmel. (Mayor story, page 25).

She was considered the key vote in the mayoralty and wasn't totally comfortable with her new-found prominence. "The pressures are tremendous on this decision at this time. I would hope there's going to be some unanimity of thought. I'm just going to try to reflect what I feel are the wishes of the constituency of Carmel."

Though shortlived as a planning commissioner, Arnold was confronted with development in Carmel and the recently enacted moratorium on building is, in her opinion, a healthy thing.

"I think considering the tremendously rapid rate of growth of Carmel in the last few years, it's not going to do any harm to have a little breather to try and take stock of ourselves and see just where we're going."

She also found her role on the planning commission frustrating. She says there's no mechanism in Carmel for denial of a business application simply on the basis of there being too many businesses here now.

"As far as city improvements or city services, if we have too many of those we're going to look like every other place around."

Arnold points with dismay to one particular day when the planning commission had to rule on five restaurant applications. "Well, with the way the city ordinances are now, each of these five applications had met the proper obligations and regulations. There was a bit of musical chairs played, but the end result is a tremendous increase in seating capacity and in several cases they will be new restaurants."

"Unless there's some flaw in design or conception," she complains, "there's very little grounds on which we can deny it."

Arnold isn't too pleased with the impact of tour buses on Carmel either and favors the restrictions recently passed by the council. "I don't know whether it's the ultimate, but it's a start. If it were feasible legally I think that some more severe restrictions would make the constituency of Carmel happier. They (buses) in some instances leave their motors running for extended periods, of time, which not only is a noise pollution factor, but it's also an air pollution factor. I don't think this is fair. They create problems of traffic and parking. I understand that as long as we've accepted gas tax money for public streets that they have a legal right to use those streets. It becomes just a legal ploy as to what degree we can direct their routes and their activities. I think the solution that's been suggested, to find an area at the mouth of the valley to park their buses, is possibly a good one that can be looked into further."

Along with the proliferation of tourist-oriented businesses, the demise of resident-oriented businesses worries her. In the special council meeting on the moratorium, Arnold voiced a suggestion that portions of Junipero might be set aside for local-serving businesses. Stressing that the suggestion was off the top of her head, she explains, "The frontage of Junipero might be kept for resident-oriented business and the north and south and east boundaries might be zoned for apartments or some sort of housing that would alleviate the need of more housing. The center of that whole area could have parking that would not be visible from any of the surrounding streets but would service the business community in that area and would even be close enough to service the downtown Ocean Avenue area. But, it would not be a huge blacktop surface that would be offensive to a lot of people and it could also service the housing surrounding it."

Though fully aware of the parking predicament in Carmel, Arnold's not sure a huge parking structure will solve the problem. "Basically I feel that creation of additional parking places will only bring more people. It won't solve the problem of local people having a place to park. I don't think the building of a three-level parking garage, for instance, is going to solve the problem. It will only be filled up."

Parking is a problem, she says, which strikes not only the commercial zone but especially the residential zone. "One of the crucial problems is the overflow of parking from the commercial district into the residential zone. It's awfully hard on the people who live close to the commercial zone. I would hope that maybe some way could be found to possibly extend the time limit into a larger portion of the residential zone except for people who might have a sticker on their car who would be allowed to park it near their own homes. How these details are worked out is something we have to deal with." Arnold sees the proposed mini-bus system as potentially a partial solution to some of the congestion and parking problems.

Arnold is convinced that the dual purpose of Sunset Center as both a community and cultural center should be upheld. She views the gymnasium and baseball field as appropriate community uses.

"There's a distinction, apparently, between community and cultural. If the mandate of the people was for both... then use of the north field as a baseball thing would be a community activity as is the use of the gym. I have a lot to learn about all the ramifications of this problem, but I would question an improper use or one use as predominate over the others if the original intent of the people of Carmel were to purchase Sunset with city funds for a dual use."

"I think when the bond issue was voted on to buy Sunset Center it was with the idea that it be a community and cultural center. I think it's important to accede to that original mandate of the people."

Space problems at Harrison Memorial Library could, she says, be alleviated by building an annex. "The library as it stands now seems to be inadequate for the community. It seems that a building as an adjunct to Harrison Memorial Library would not be a bad idea. Whether it's the best solution or not I don't know, but to me it seems that it is at this time."

"It becomes a matter of space. I think that a library should serve whoever wants to use it, if it has the space to do it. If that means an annex and that will solve the problem, fine. It may very well not solve the problem but I think it's important

PAUL DENNY IS PEERLESS DEALER

Paul J. Denny, who has achieved considerable success since opening his automobile sales room in Carmel, has further expanded his business and has taken over the sales agency for the Peerless automobiles. Denny is the only automobile dealer on the Monterey Peninsula handling the Peerless and Oldsmobile lines.

Denny has in a few short months built up a remarkably large patronage and scores of residents of Carmel and nearby sections are now the proud owners of automobiles purchased from him.

The Oldsmobile line has been handled by Mr. Denny for several months and is favorably known. The Peerless has not before been sold on the Peninsula and Denny is confident it will achieve a very large following here, just as it has everywhere it has been available. It is one of the oldest and best known makes of automobiles in America and has held its own with the finest and most expensive cars made.

Mr. Denny now has a Peerless deluxe sedan and a sport roadster on exhibition and these are attracting a great deal of attention and favorable comment. Everybody is cordially invited to call at the sales rooms on Dolores street next to the post office in Carmel and see the new cars.

The Peerless "Six-Eighty" includes the following equipment: snubbers, spare tire, tube and cover, motorometer and bar cap, bumpers, front and rear, automatic stoplight, sidewings, included on touring and roadsters, Lockheed hydraulic brakes and balloon tires, standard equipment.

WILL JAMES DOES ONE "UNLIKE ANY OTHER" TIMES SAYS

Will James, who was in Carmel for several months this spring in a house on Carmel Point, and who purchased property here, has produced a book — to quote the New York Times — "Unlike any other. A book full of romance and emotion, excitement and beauty. He has never told so stirring a narrative or drawn such thrilling pictures." It is called "Smoky" and is the story of a cow pony. It is published by Charles Scribners Sons.

DELBERT WERMUTH WOUNDED IN ACTION

Delbert Samuel Wermuth, Jr., Private First Class, of the Marine Corps Reserve has been wounded in action on Sept. 28, in the Korean area, according to word received yesterday by his wife, Mrs. Delbert Wermuth, Jr. of Carmel. Details have not yet been received.

Delbert graduated from Carmel High School in 1945, and went into the Marine Corps soon after. He was on active duty on the Korean front when wounded. He and his wife, and daughter, Connie, 14 months, make their home on Dolores and Fifth Streets. Delbert's sister, Clare Olive, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Samuel Wermuth, Sr., and his uncle, Earl Wermuth, live in Carmel.

SHOES MEAN MORE THAN BUSINESS TO THE ROWE FAMILY OF CARMEL

By Carol van den Berg

Thousands of busy feet have been fitted with comfort and grace in the Shoe Box and the Village Shoe Tree over the past 18 years. The owner of both shops, James Rowe, a dynamic personality on the Carmel scene, is presently serving as president of the Monterey Chamber of Commerce.

Rowe holds membership in the Carmel Rotary Club, the Elks and the Masons. He is past president of the Carmel Business Association and now is serving on its board of directors.

Mr. and Mrs. Rowe have two sons, Don and Deen, who both attended Carmel schools. The older one, Don, is living elsewhere. Deen is a partner in his father's shoe company.

Mrs. Rowe was active in the Eastern Star and belongs to the Hammond Organ Society. "I like to play jazz on the organ!" she said. But her biggest hobby has been working with her husband, sporadically designing new shoes for their stores. With a smile, she said, "Our business is a family enterprise." Mrs. Rowe pioneered the medium high heel in America some eight years ago. She was also one of the originators of colorful fabrics in footwear.

Deen studied shoe manufacturing in Switzerland and last year designed casual shoes, called Dino's, that were made to order in Italy.

Water Regulations

Editor's Note: Following is a copy of a letter sent to the Public Utilities Commission.

Dear Sirs:

As a retired older woman, living alone and not at all well, I am writing concerning the new water regulations. I only water my yard when I absolutely have to in order to maintain what I have spent considerable time and money on in the past. This usually means over four or five days unless we have a heat wave.

In the last several years I have found my yard work restricted due to health problems. Now I am told that I may only water between the hours of 5-7 a.m. This poses a real hardship as my nights are not always restful and the early morning hours my severest times. I generally try to coincide my watering time with the hours of household chores in order to arrange times for appointments, marketing, rest, etc. I am detailing this because I know there will be many older persons like myself who will find it almost impossible to accomplish except at considerable bodily stress because the early mornings are often very difficult and cold as well; and we are slow starters. I do realize, of course, that these impossible hours will truly discourage much watering, but I am sure Carmel and the Peninsula will not benefit by having withered gardens and drying out trees.

It would certainly seem to me that better results might be achieved by asking our total cooperation in the consumption of water for all purposes, not just gardens. I do not own a garbage disposal, a dish washer, nor a washing machine, not to mention a swimming pool. These are all large consumers of water and would seem more logical cut-off points, as everyone can carry out the garbage, wash a few dishes by hand, and use their washing machines less often. If all around cooperation won't work, then at least permit some alternate hours so that personal choice is possible.

And to top it all, a garden watered in the early morning will tend to dry out during the day, while one watered in the early evening will hold its moisture during the night and the water will be better utilized by plants and trees. There is also the problem of lowered water pressure with everyone trying to water at the same time. So, unless you are trying to stop us all dead in our tracks, let's have some regulation that is possible to carry out in a good spirit of cooperation, in preference to one of considerable frustration.

Regelski

Dear Sir:

What is a Regelski? A Muzak computer? His so called "review" of Paul Desmond's performance at the Monterey Jazz Festival was a vicious attack and an authoritarian order for Desmond to retire.

I heard Desmond's set and he played as lyrically as he has always played over the many years I have heard him. To my knowledge I've never heard Regelski's last alto sax solo and whether or not he could hit the high notes. And in the section where I was sitting, the audience was not yawning over Desmond's performance.

I can understand medical problems, but I think your paper deserves a better critic than one who has obviously had a tin ear transplant.

Once upon a time...

Marshall for China and in 1940 returned ahead of War's outbreak, to serve with the Navy.

Going back to his father for a brief remark: Argyll made a real mark with this writer when he gave his services to right what he felt was a wrong. Stanford Prof. Rolf Bolin's wife had been returning from a meeting late evening and noticed a car following her. She accelerated and so did the car behind.

As it turned out it was a Carmel police car and when she received a ticket for speeding, the senior Campbell took her case without charge and spent most of two days in court in Few Memorial Hall in Monterey where to a packed house he staged a monumental defense of Mrs. Bolin.

As a result changes were effected in the matter of unmarked police cars and remain to this day in the state law. It was typical that Argyll Campbell took the case at his own expense, as he did so often.

Carmel benefitted so much from the Campbell family, and Judge Campbell, who went on to the superior bench from which he is now retired but still sits in occasional cases, was active in many civic affairs.

These read like a catalogue, for he has been a Carmel city councilman, for more than eight years a member of the Carmel school board and became its president, as well as president of the county bar association, commander of the Carmel post of the American Legion, trustee of the Ralph Xhandler Harrison Memorial Library, and director of the Peninsula Community Hospital.

And his wife, Doris, has raised three beautiful daughters.

Asked about his favorite activity, like a true Carmelite Gordon would probably answer either swimming or cutting wood for the winter at his place in the hills.

Returning to the old carefree days, Gordy was a great swimmer and I like to think back to a college-age day when three of us, Ross Burton being the third, drove a cut-down Model T For to Big Sur for a swim in the pool under the waterfall in the State park.

The old road down coast was rugged and, before the bridges, cut back into the canyons to pass the steep breaks where streams ran to the sea. Back in the Palo Colorado, there was a steep hairpin turn into redwood dust a foot deep and as slippery as talc.

All of us had to leave the car, one pushing and yet at the controls, holding down on the low band pedal and steering, while the other two pushed behind. We made it, but barely, and otherwise it was an easy trip down coast.

Returning it was another story for the tires had wearied and we proved a great repair team, de-rimmed, patching, pumping and then breezing a few miles onward. Gordy's bulldog strength and tenacity were valued on this non-athletic squad as well.

Years later, at the reception for the new Judge Campbell, his wife Doris remarked so aptly with her wonderful smile, "Sure, he was cut out for the job. Gordon was born to be a judge."

Vegetable gardening in Carmel -- year round

By IRENE GAASCH

Growing vegetables can be done year round in Carmel if cool weather vegetables are used, according to vocational-agricultural teacher Richard Willard.

He advises gardeners to choose a level sunny spot that is easily accessible and not to plant everything in one day. He finds that people get enthusiastic and do all their planting at one time. Not only does this leave them tired on that day, says Willard, but it means many of their plants will mature at the same time. This creates an abundance of mature vegetables, and unless the person preserves some of the food or gives it away, there will be a lot of waste. Then instead of being a source of pleasure, the garden becomes something to contend with. Willard suggests planting every three weeks to eliminate this situation.

It is a good idea to begin gardening with a small garden. Plant only the amount of vegetables that you feel you will use. It is easy to over plant, or start a garden project that is too difficult to take care of when one already has a busy schedule, advised Willard.

Cool weather vegetables that grow well here are artichokes, beets, broccoli, brussels sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, lettuce, mustard, peas, radishes, rhubarb, spinach, turnips and winter squash such as zucchini. Tomatoes do well here in the fall because it's our warm season, says Willard. He recommends the San Francisco fog variety and says that the cherry tomatoes will do better in Carmel.

"Getting large tomatoes to grow in Carmel is almost impossible," said Willard. "Notice I said 'almost,'" he added with a grin, "because I know some gardener is going to come in with a huge beefsteak tomato and say he grew it in his backyard in Carmel." He said he was sure that it could be done but he finds that the smaller variety will do better. Although tomatoes may be grown from seeds, he recommends getting a few bedding plants.

Broccoli, cabbage, celery and cauliflower will probably do better if purchased as young plants, too. This is also true of artichokes which he says makes a nice ornamental hedge, either for the garden or the flower bed. This perennial plant may reach a spread of six feet and needs lots of space but it does well in Carmel's cool climate.

Willard finds that cabbage, and any of the head varieties of lettuce, will do well here but the heads are generally small. He suggests the leaf variety of lettuce, spinach and Swiss chard. The gardener may cut only the leaves needed and will have the freshest possible vegetables for use with these varieties, says Willard.

Broccoli and cabbage do well in the small garden and may even be grown in containers. By harvesting broccoli before the buds open, a single planting can be encouraged to produce side shoots and provide produce for several months. This is true of Brussel sprouts, Swiss chard and spinach also.

By planting radishes every three weeks, Willard says, the gardener can always have a fresh supply of them. Turnips and beets are usually ready in 60 days but may be stored in the ground until needed. They must be kept growing, warns Willard, or they will develop a strong flavor.

GREEN BEANS will do fairly well in the climate, but produce more in the sunny climate such as Carmel Valley.

Both the bush and vine variety of peas will grow well in Carmel. Green onions and rhubarb are naturals here, says Willard. Both may be planted in flower beds provided the gardener uses compatible insecticides.

Blackberries and strawberries are two fruits that grow well in this climate says Willard. Some varieties of apples will do well but most stone fruits (such as peaches) will not do well because they need frost and warm days to be successful.

Willard suggests bringing warmth to the garden through the use of mulch or a black plastic ground covering. This may be done while the seeds are in the ground and also when the plants are young. Aluminum foil and white cardboard may be used to reflect sun onto the garden too, he says.

"A good general rule for growing fruits or vegetables in the Carmel climate is whether the plant will germinate in 60 days or not," said Willard. He finds that if a plant germinates in 60 days it will do well here.

Regardless of what plants one has in the garden, one certainty is snails, warns Willard. He's open to suggestions for snail control. "There are as many control methods as there are snails," he said, adding with dismay in his voice, that none had been very effective in his garden. He laughs, "possibly the best thing to do is find a Frenchman."

But snails aside, Willard feels that the Carmel gardener will be rewarded with fresh produce. He suggests experimenting with growing different vegetables, fruits and even herbs. Many herbs such as rosemary, thyme, tarragon and chives, to name a few, are excellent plants for this climate. "With a little planning, the gardener could have some fresh produce on a year-round basis here," he said. By experimenting with plants, says Willard, the gardener will find that many plants will adapt to what he describes as our truly "unique" climate.

IN ADDITION to adding flavor when cooking, fresh rosemary gives a pleasant smell in the garden and its pretty blue flowers attract bees, the gardener's pollinating friend.

MEYER LEMONS do well in containers and as trees in Carmel.

It's time you and your gas furnace started doing things for each other.

Winter's coming. As it always does. And now is the time to check your gas furnace, so you can keep the home fires burning more efficiently.

For the most part, the things you should do are simple.

Make sure that the main burner flame is burning blue, not yellow. Otherwise, it may be using more gas, and producing less heat.

If you have a wall furnace, see that the area around the air openings and controls are free of lint and dust; if you see accumulations of what appear to be soot, you need the help of an expert.

If you have a central furnace, clean or replace the air filter now, and at least once more during the heating season. A clogged filter wastes energy and increases heating costs.

If the pilot is out, turn the thermostat to the lowest possible setting before relighting, make sure the main burner valve and the pilot valve are turned off and allow a few minutes for the gas to clear. Then check the manufacturer's lightup instructions which appear on most furnaces. Once the pilot is ignited, reset the thermostat to 68° or lower. If you're uneasy about it, call PG&E for assistance.

If your furnace needs parts or repairs, call a qualified furnace repair service. If you smell gas, call us. Never look for a gas leak with a lighted match or other flame.

For more information, ask for our booklets, "At Your Service" and "Gas and Electric Safety in Your Home" at your local PG&E office.

With just a little loving care, you and your furnace will be ready for a long, warm winter.

Helen Arnold...

at all costs that Harrison be maintained. I'd hate to think that Carmel children had to go all the way down to the mouth of the valley to get library service."

More than anything else, perhaps, public apathy upsets the newest council member. "Time and time again I've seen people come to council meetings, and, as soon as their own subject is presented and dealt with, they pick up their books and purses and leave as though nothing else the council did was of any concern to them. Well, if they feel like that they must bear the responsibility of what's been happening."

Arnold sees the newly formed Old Carmel group as a positive step in the right direction, but warns of over-emotionalism. "I think it's all to the good for Carmel. I think as long as they maintain a rational approach to the problems, they can accomplish a lot by making the wishes of the people of Carmel apparent. It's only in this way that the council can become responsive to the constituency."

"I think it's too bad if they become irrational and over emotional because I think they're losing a lot of their objectivity and usefulness. When there are vital issues that people feel strongly about emotionalism is pretty hard to control. But, a state of acrimony doesn't solve problems."

Arnold suggests people research matters before either condemning or voicing support. "The Old Carmel group is talking about reactivating parts of the Larry Livingstone Plan (Ocean Avenue mall). I don't know yet whether I'm for or against it. It should be pointed out that if Ocean Avenue is made into a mall this will further force parking of people who now park on Ocean into the residential area, so this may be just increasing the problem. There's a great danger in trying to implement too much of the Larry Livingstone Plan. I'm sure people are aware of this. One of the things in the plan is widening of Junipero into a four-lane street. I don't think there's anyone in Carmel who wants that."

Arnold favors annexation as a tool for control over bordering areas. She points to a recent plan for the rerouting of the road around Carmel Point as a danger that could have been immediately stopped if the Point were a part of Carmel. As long as it's under county jurisdiction she wonders if the Point will be adequately protected.

Arnold's not sure about the appropriateness of leash laws in the residential zone, but feels "people should be responsible for their own animals. Anyone who does turn their dogs out to roam loose should be reprimanded in some way."

Art in gem and mineral display

A SLICE OF AGATE is a work of art.

KARNA GRIFFIN has a hard time trying to decide just which rock she will buy. Above is a geode — it's lovely design revealed when it was cut. Water brings out the design of rock shown below.

Geodes and agates, cut and brightly polished, were some of the many specimens of rocks on display at the gem and mineral show held at the Monterey Fairgrounds this weekend.

The show, an annual presentation of the Carmel Valley Gem and Mineral Society, features rough cut gems and display cases with highly polished gems and intricate and unusual rock specimens. Some of these are left as nature arranged them while others have been rearranged by man and now hold books in place rather than a mountain, or they serve as the beautiful elements in a piece of jewelry.

One of the most popular booths at the Mission fiesta is the cotton candy booth. There sugar and coloring are poured into a fast-spinning vat and a billowing pink fluffy cloud of spun sugar is caught on a paper cone. Will Lyon (shown at left) spent his day making cones and fiesta-goers, especially the younger set, seemed to enjoy his efforts. Lack of sun did not effect attendance at the fiesta as a record crowd enjoyed the afternoon of entertainment, food, carnival games and the arts and crafts fair. Money earned from the fiesta is used to maintain the Junipero Serra Mission. More pictures on page 12.

Sedgman injury fails to foil Senior's Tennis

by Joan Murnigham

Despite the unfortunate injury to top seeded Frank Sedgman, the Senior Tennis Tournament at Pebble Beach rolled on in its usual first class fashion.

Top quality tennis was augmented by the wit and humor of such as Pancho Gonzales whose broad smile and casual humor endeared him to all watching.

Among those who sat through the varying weather during the matches were the Darius Keatons, the Robert McMahons, Dr. and Mrs. Gerard Martin, Jill Sherill, Charles Schultz, the Clint Eastwoods and the Alex Heids. Also looking on were the Max Hodges, Perry Miller, Kenneth Hollands and the Shumates.

Millie Brown was general chairman for the event which is managed by Del Monte Properties with proceeds going to the Monterey Peninsula Symphony Guild.

Some three hundred players took to the courts during the five days of play with large crowds cheering them on. In the new event, the Invitational 35's, Don Kierbow of Benecia defeated Richard Leach from Laguna Beach. But Mr. Leach came back with partner Horst Ritter in the doubles, to defeat Kierbow and Whitney Reed. The winner's purse for the singles was $1200 and for the doubles $700.

The "premier" event, the 45 Singles, found Sven Davidson defeating Beppe Merlo for the $7500 first prize money. In the 45 doubles, Hugh Stewart and Bob How won over Torben Ulrich and Sven Davidson. The purse for that team was $3500.

In the 55 Singles we find Lynn Hippenstiel as the winner and in the 55 Doubles Mr. Hippenstiel came back with partner Milt Richardson to take top spot.

Robin Hippenstiel was the winner of the 60 Singles but lost in the semi-finals doubles match. The 60 Doubles champions were Al Newton and Nort Benner.

KEEPING AN EAGLE-EYE on the line is crucial to the line judge.

The 65 Singles went to James Kelleher from San Leandro who defeated Bob Shepherd of San Francisco. Robert Seller and John Light who had been seeded No. 2, were the winners of the 65 Doubles over an unseeded team of Holzkamp and Casse.

The women's 40 Doubles were taken by Donna Myers and Evelyn Robards over our local team of Jill Leach and Marge Kohler.

Along the Beach

by Joan Murnighan

Thursday night was party night — the parties revolving around the Senior Tennis Tournament but with some interesting sidelights.

Dick and Betty Ghent invited a number of friends in for cocktails to meet their houseguests which included tennis players Beppe Merlo of Italy and Dr. Paul Williams. Not in any way involved with tennis but certainly distinguished were the Ghent's other guests, Bennett Bradbury, renowned artist from Laguna and Dorothy Kirsten, world famous opera diva. Miss Kirsten looked just as lovely as she did when she became one of the first opera leading ladies to prove you could look as lovely as you sound. Mr. Bradbury's exhibit at the Monterey Museum of Art opened to raves on Saturday.

The Ghent's had to share their many guests with the television set for that was the night of the first debate. Fortunately they had a TV in every room so guests could drift in and out and catch up on what was happening.

Down the road at the Beach and Tennis Club a huge cocktail party was going on in honor of the many players. Because there were three hundred entrants in the tourney, and most brought their wives, the guest list was limited to participants and the top echelon of Del Monte Properties, sponsors of the tournament. The Gawthrops, Olivers, Holmes and Campbells were wending their way through the crowd making everyone feel welcome.

On Saturday night, a dinner was held in conjunction with the tournament with the McFarrens (she's President of the Symphony Guild which was the beneficiary of the tournament) the, the Kenneth Hollands, the McLellands, Vic Seixas, the Hugh Stewarts and Bob Howe among those in attendance. Hugh Stewart and Bob Howe went on the next day to win the 45 Doubles Championship.

While the Seniors were on the courts at the Beach Club, the Juniors were playing in the Santa Catalina Invitation Tournament at the school. Susan Catlin and Anne Ford from the host school won the 18 Doubles while Wendy Richards, also a Catalina student took the 18 singles.

Julie Yurkovich and Hillary Holmes were runners-up in the 16 doubles and the Santa Catalina team tied for 1st place.

Zo Lord opened her lovely home to the RLS Sponsors Club welcome coffee for mothers of new students at the school. The new parents were greeted by Sue Sailer, President of the Sponsors Club and Gordon Davis, Headmaster and Anne Washburn, Director of Girl's Activities at Robert Louis Stevenson. Some of the exciting plans for the year were presented including an invitation to the opening luncheon to be held on October 6 at Monterey Peninsula Country Club. All parents are invited to this "kick-off" for the coming year.

Don't forget to call with news of the Forest. We welcome all types of news items. The number is 624-8065.

Deaths

Gen Roy Lasseter

Maj. Gen Roy Lasseter of Pebble Beach died suddenly last Thursday at Community Hospital.

Following a distinguished 30 year military career, General Lasseter retired on the Peninsula in 1969. During his military life he served in both World War II and Korea. During World War II he served with the 1st Cavalry Division and Army's I Corps in the New Guinea, Admiralty and Philippines Campaigns.

During the Korean War he was commander of X Corps and his last duty assignment was as Commander, U.S. Army, Hawaii.

To read all this, one would not expect to find the gentle, quiet kind man that was Roy Lasseter. He served with distinction for two years as President of the Monterey Peninsula United Fund and was the founding manager of the Pebble Beach branch of Monterey Savings and Loan.

Anita and Roy Lasseter became integral parts of the community immediately upon his retirement. They served as hosts for Club XIX at the Concours d'Elegance for two years and would have been hosts for the Senior Tennis Tournament, just completed.

At Monterey Savings and Loan, Gen. Lasseter was also a gracious host as well as manager. He was extremely popular with the young people of the Forest, never demeaning their small deposits and frequent withdrawals. I think the best epitaph that could be written about this fine gentleman came from some of those same young people. "He was a really cool dude," they said... and that he was.

Dr. William Fitzhugh

One of our outstanding physicians and community member, Dr. William McPherson Fitzhugh, passed away on September 19. Dr. Fitzhugh, who came from a pioneer California family, leaves his wife Alice, a resident of Pebble Beach and several children and grandchildren.

Before his retirement, Dr. Fitzhugh was on the staff at Monterey and Community Hospitals, was a Fellow of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and was on the Board of Directors of the San Francisco Medical Society. In World War II he served as a Lt. Commander and was also a medical officer in Korea with the Air Force. He received an honorary Doctor of Laws from the University of Wyoming.

Among his many interests, he served as the Board of Directors of Pets Unlimited and the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art. He was a former President of the Sons of the American Revolution, Salinas Valley Chapter and also a past President of the McGill Graduate Society and a curator of the McGill Oster Library. He was a member of the Old Guard Bohemian Club, Order of Cincinnati, the Olympic Club and Commonwealth Club of San Francisco, the San Francisco Symphony and Opera Guild, the Pacheco Club, Monterey Peninsula Country Club, Beach Club, Society of California Pioneers, Elks Club, English Speaking Union, the Masons and Knights Templar.

Dr. Fitzhugh was a graduate of Stanford and McGill University Medical School.

Cancer Society plans auction

What sounds like a really fantastic evening is being planned by the American Cancer Society on October 6th at the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach. The evening will begin with cocktails followed by dinner and dancing and a grand auction. The dinner is being planned by Tom Oliver so it should be worthy of superlatives. Assisting him on reserventions are Dee Robertson and Millie Brown. All of this begins at 7 p.m. and your $20 ticket not only includes all of the above but a $7 rebate in scrip to be used at the auction.

Among the varied items to be sold are a Week for Two at the John Gardiner Tennis Ranch in Scottsdale, a Malcolm Moran sculpture, top line skis, a Las Vegas week-end, dinners at a number of the better restaurants in the area, a 9 x 12 mural and a used station wagon.

The auction on Wednesday night will be limited in time and to the number of items to be put up for bid because on Thursday the scene shifts to the Monterey County Fairgrounds. Here a large number of other outstanding merchandise will go up to the highest bidder.

Dan Turrentine, auctioneer par excellence and Dr. Gerard Martin, incoming President of the Cancer Society's Monterey-San Benito Chapter, will be extracting bids from those present. These gentlemen are so persuasive they could probably get a good price for a mild bore. Instead it will be a wild boar they will be putting up for bids along with golf packages, paintings, radios, calculators, an Odyssey 200 pong game, souffle dishes and crock pots, a bust of Brahms, leather and suede jacket and other beautiful clothing items. For those who like to cook A LOT, there will be half a truck of onions and half a truck of bell peppers. (These may be purchased by the sack.) A raft of other fresh produce will be available as well as case lots of canned goods and plants of every variety.

Admission to the Fairgrounds will be $1 which will include a ticket on the door prize, a 1976 Mustang II Ghia.

Norman Mee is General Chairman and Pauline Stanley and Joan Hatley along with Anita Zaruch are working on the auction. John Cravelho, out-going President of the Chapter, is responsible for the door prize.

Further information and-or donations will be in the hands of the American Cancer Society's local office or by calling 372-4521.

The auction at the Fairgrounds will take place from 2-5 P.M. With the number of exciting items already in and more pouring in daily, there should be something to interest almost every taste, and you certainly couldn't ask for a better cause.

Personality Plus

"Why would anyone want to interview me?" was Nan Bomberger's reaction when I asked her to be this week's Personality Plus. As we went on with our talk it became very obvious that there were many reasons for interviewing this very bright woman. In 1960 Nan married Russell Bomberger, Professor at the Naval Postgraduate School. Her Mother always impressed her with putting something back into a community from which we all take, so Nan became an active volunteer in the educational community.

Her parents were both educators so her interest was a natural one. She served on the School Board Finance Committee, County Committee Studying Transportation and the Housing Committee of the League of Women Voters. The latter is a "watch dog" type committee keeping abreast of available funds for housing and how they are used, etc. She also worked on Childbirth Education, the Infant Care Center and the Forest Committee.

She was President of the American Association of University Women, an organization with a multitude of facets. The AAUW offers programs in everything from Bridge Lessons and French Conversation groups to seminars on Consumer Awareness, the United Nations, Investments, Voter Information and Women in the Justice System.

Her first "full time" job was with the Infant Care Center in Seaside which provides daily nursery facilities for Mothers who must work. Although this was extremely rewarding, when the opportunity came to join the Lyceum, she couldn't resist. This brought her back to her first love, education.

The Lyceum was formed in 1960 when a group of citizens became concerned over the total lack of emphasis on the mentally gifted child. The Lyceum is a non-profit organization which utilizes the human resources of the community to bring a large number of seminars, workshops, conferences and tutorials to interested students. As Executive Director of the Lyceum, it is Nan's job to coordinate the varied programs and to be constantly available for suggestions and requests for other programs. She is also involved in fund raisers and works with the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services which is one of the Lyceums greatest supporters. Some of the special programs such as music, are helped by the Monterey Jazz Festival and the Bing Crosby Foundation.

Nan is always on the lookout for new programs to stimulate the young mind and when you observe that the fall schedule includes 34 different seminars, it is obvious that she and the Board of Directors have been successful. The seminars, depending on their content, are open to students from Kindergarten through High School and cover subjects ranging from foods to medicine to math to creative arts to Einstein and Relativity.

Nan's bent for education is seeing further fruition in the persons of her two daughters. Anne is one of the first girls to attend Robert Louis Stevenson School and Jane is at Monte Vista.

Submarine designer turns bird carver

By IRENE GAASCH

Jack Gilmore did not plan to be a bird carver. It's something that just happened when he retired from a 30 year career as a naval architect, where he designed polaris submarines and research ships.

"I've always loved nature, especially birds," he said in a soft spoken voice that still carries a Virginia drawl. Feeding birds is part of his daily life, and has been for years. He has lived in Carmel less than a month and already has a bluejay eating out of his hand. "In fact, if I'm not there to feed her, she taps on the window," he added.

He grew up near the Florida shoreline and spent many hours observing birds there. Later he and his family had a home in the Virginia woods and he had regular acquaintances with several species of birds as well as with the other inhabitants of the area such as the chipmunks.

When he retired from his career about 5 years ago, he carved one of his favorite birds for fun. "It was a little nuthatch. I didn't put any feet on it because I hadn't learned how to carve feet yet," he said. Although he still has the little nuthatch for sentimental reasons, he now views it as a crudely carved piece.

This is no surprise for Gilmore is now rated as one of the best bird carvers in the country. His life-like renditions of birds reflect a combination of his observations and research plus his artistic ability.

Yet, Gilmore still confines his carving to what he calls "hobby time." He wants no pressure to work, saying he lived with schedules for years. So he takes no commissions and carves what and when he likes. The rest of his time is spent observing as many birds as he can in their natural habitat. Gilmore and his wife also enjoy wildflowers and the seashore.

Since all three of their daughters have made the west their home, the Gilmores decided to follow, and Carmel seemed the ideal place to the two nature lovers. Both have been estatic with the Point Lobos Reserve, the area beaches and the abundance of birds in the area. "I add new birds to my carving list almost every day," said Gilmore who plans to resume his carving this week when his bandsaw arrives. But before he begins any physical work, he makes a detailed sketch of the model, considering such features as wing span.

After using the bandsaw to make a rough shape of the bird, Gilmore completes the rest of his work with hand tools. Using chisels, knives and rasps, he carves the intricate plumage well into the quiet hours of the night, his favorite time to work. Rather than casting the feet of metal, as many bird carvers do, he carves them from the same block of wood. He uses wire for enforcement when needed but he inserts this into the wood. He uses oil paints for the painted birds.

Each of Gilmore's birds is life size. He works from life models, photographs which he takes himself, and backs this up with hours of reading about the bird and its habitat. He now has an extensive library of books on birds which he uses for research.

His carvings are exact in size, coloring and postures. Most of them are carved from bass wood, a soft wood similar to linden. This is his favorite wood for his painted birds. He also uses mahogany and enjoys working with exotic woods like rosewood, black walnut and myrtle. When using these woods, he leaves the carving in its natural coloring and finishes the piece with an oil rub.

After sharing his hobby with friends, Gilmore with their encouragement, began showing his work in shows. He took best-in-show honors in the novice category of the Ward Foundation World Championship Wildfowl Carving exhibition in 1973. His carving, an 18-inch falcon of mahogany was his first entry in competition. He also took honors in 1974 for a pelican carved from poplar and in 1975 for a golden eagle carved from mahogany.

"After the shows, people wanted to buy the carvings," said Gilmore who still makes no decision on what he will sell until he is confronted with a buyer. "I get very attached to many of my carvings," he admitted, and the shelves of his living room offered the proof.

Many of Gilmore's works have been purchased by natural history museums throughout the country or are in private collections. He is partial to songbirds and birds of prey, since he has befriended many of them at his feeders through the years but he carves from all traditional categories — waterfowl, game, birds of prey and songbirds.

THE MUSIC CORNER

By IRVING W. GREENBERG

CHAMBER MUSIC FOR WIND AND BRASS (Leningrad State Philharmonic Wind Quintet — ABC-Westminster Gold WGS-8322).

This is yet another recording made in the U.S.S.R. by Melodya, and released by ABC Records as a production of Kathryn King. The works recorded on this disc are: Leonid Balai: Divertimento for Wind Quintet and Harp, Op. 7; Marcel Poot: Concerto for Wind Quintet; Villa-Lobos: Choros No. 4 for Three French Horns and Trombone; and Paul Hindemith: Sonata for French Horns. This is music in the modern and contemporary idiom, and quite esoteric, at that. Diatonic harmony, with added dissonances, predominate, and balanced phrases with antecedents and consequents are also outstanding features of this type of writing. But, in spite of these divergences, the music is grounded in the rhythms and the harmonies of the Baroque and the Renaissance eras.

Leonid Balai, a Russian, born 1940, has inclined towards the clear, static, ostinato-based forms in his Divertimento. The ternary form of the first movement, Metamorphosis, is defined by the ostinatos in both sections heard predominantly in the bassoon. In the middle section, the fast 6-8 in which flute and oboe soar over the clarinet and bassoon ostinato gives way to a 2-4 as the French horn begins to dominate. This transition brings the return of the first intense section. In the second movement, the harp predominates. Though ternary in feeling, the three sections use the same melody. The harp is here used as a continuo instrument, it accompanies, breaking up the texture with rolled chords and ostinatos. The third movement is in a loose, casual sonata rondo form — an eighteenth century favorite for last movements, and an excellent vehicle for featuring the instruments as soloists and in various combinations. Its jazzy rhythms place it in the mainstream of neo-classical style. The finale is an appropriately gay and excited movement for this light and gracious work.

The Concertino for Wind Quintet by Marcel Poot, a

Flemish Belgian, born in 1901, is a serious work in three movements with the first two connected. The Allegro con brio is in four sections in which the first and third treat similar material and the second and fourth sections present contrasting material. This alternating form proceeds directly into the strict Passacaglia in which the theme is heard first in the oboe. This variation form is one of the forms of the High Baroque. The last movement is based on imitative treatment of the thematic material and is cast in a ternary form. The distinctive tone colors of each instrument lend themselves well to a fughetto and the agility of the instruments favors the joyous character of a finale.

The less well known series of works by Villa-Lobos, called Choros, is similar in style and expression to his Bachianas Brasileiras. One strong sentiment prevails — a kind of longing or nostalgia which is derived from the saudades of native Brazilian music. The word choros is related to the Spanish and means a kind of cry. Written for various combinations of instruments, this particular one recorded here features trombone with French horns. It is a good example of neo-classic style with its symmetrical and non-symmetrical sections and the use of both the trombone vibrato and slide, but a kind of jazzy music-hall rhythm. The first section is a small ternary in which the ostinato in the horns accompanies the solo trombone. A subsequent section features a wailing trombone; a heavy or slow vibrato accentuates the yearning quality of the horn. A happy and gay finale complete with trombone slurs dispels any doubt that it is all quite light-hearted. For a monumental contrast, though still within neo-classic style, Hindemith's Sonata for Four Horns serves as a perfect model. The forms used in this work are strict — the first movement is a fugue, the second is a symmetrical and sectional piece with an imitative central section which contains a long discursive subject, and the last movement is a set of variations on a Renaissance tune. In the first fugue, the polyphony combines to make a strongly homophonic or chordal texture. The stateliness of the theme and the slow duple meter contribute to this result. The theme of the last movement, drawn from a collection of anonymous polyphonic songs of the 1520s, exemplified perfectly the neo-classic composer's ability to draw on meaningful material from the past for his own use. Hindemith's treatment of the theme is complex and refers to past variation techniques as well. In one variation the theme appears in long notes, much like a renaissance cantus firmus variation; in another, it is woven into virtuoso perpetual motion. In the third variation, which is the most extended, it appears again in long notes together with other faster-moving voices which are imitative and derived from the theme itself. A nippy march follows, as does a variation in 6-8, closely related to the march; a final cadence in homophonic chorale-like style finishes the work.

The Leningrad State Philharmonic Wind Quintet, presumably composed of first-desk members of the Leningrad Symphony Orchestra, form a contiguous ensemble in full rapport, and very much oriented to and in harmony with these idiomatic and stylistic contemporary elements. These four works are performed with a zestful interplay of the various instruments, with a spirited expressiveness, and with a keen display of versatility. Of the four works recorded here, the short one of Villa-Lobos and the long one of Hindemith are much more responsive to the listener, than the pieces by Balai, who is unknown in the West and to that of Marcel Poot, of doubtful originality. Yet, by their inferential playing, this Russian Wind Quintet evokes a common spirit among these wildly diverse composers, uniting them in a peroration of musical neo-classic elements.

The tone quality is excellent and the sound is bright and lively. This disc can be recommended to those who would experience and taste music that is rather unknown, but of excellent thematic quality.

RUSSIAN WEDDING, FESTIVAL AND SEASONAL SONGS (Rare Recordings of Russian Folk Choruses — ABC Records-Westminster Gold-WGM 8320).

This rare disc, recorded by Melodya in the U.S.S.R., and presented by ABC Records as a production of Kathryn King, features all types of Russian folk and ethnic songs relating to weddings and other celebrations having at its basis seasonal activities. There are seventeen songs in all, sung by famous soloists and representative groups from various sections of the Soviet Union, including some performed by a group from the Red Army.

The importance of these community events and the ritualistic significance attached to their celebration indicates ancient traditions relatively unchanged since very early times. Indeed, the texts of many of the songs contain elements of the animistic, pre-Christian religion of the Slavic peoples, while the music itself shows ancient forms not to be found in less ritualistic genres, such as love songs and dance tunes. In listening to these wedding and festival songs, the professional groups performing them not only entertain, but are used as an inverted looking glass back through the rich, ancient heritage of the Russian music in village life.

The various Choruses that sing these songs are exacting professional groups that are closely oriented to and in perfect

Harp concert at MPC

The unique and acclaimed Mimura Harp Orchestra of Tokyo will give a concert on Friday (Oct. 1) at 8 p.m. in the Gym-Auditorium of Monterey Peninsula College. The orchestra features grand and Irish harps played by an ensemble of gifted young women, ranging in age from 15 to their mid-twenties. The orchestra is on its fifth international tour under the honorary patronage of the Japanese Ministry of Culture and the MPC program will be co-sponsored by the Japanese-American Citizens League and MPC Community Services.

Tsutomū Mimura, founder and conductor, will direct the ensemble in a program of international classics — Vivaldi, Handel, Mozart, Schubert, Bach and Saint Saens as well as Japanese folk and contemporary music.

Mimura is best known outside his own country as the author of the widely-translated "Harp Method," a five-volume work on systematic training of harp technique. He is president of the Nippon Harp Association and executive director of the Tokyo Youth Symphony Orchestra.

It was in this post that he first began a quest for an "ideal" musical instrument — one comparable to both Oriental and Occidental classic music and one suitable for both solo and ensemble work. His first choice fell upon the harp but the modern concert harp was too large for the hands of the youngest pupils, too bulky to transport for ensemble playing, and too expensive. He renewed his search and found his answer in the Irish harp.

Ireland had, few living makers of Irish harps — Japan had none so Mimura induced Japanese craftsmen to turn their talents to a new purpose. So successful was the effort that the Mimura Harp Orchestra was acclaimed when it gave a command performance for the Prime Minister of Ireland.

It has filled Carnegie Hall, New York, and been heard throughout the British Empire on special BBC radio and television simulcast.

Admission to the concert is $2. Children under 14 will be admitted free.

rapport with this genre of vocal display. All nuances, variegated tonalities, and emotional reactions are brought out with an intense, emphatic, lyric and melodic peroration.

Such soloists as Sergei Lemeshev, in "Dunya the Spinner"; and Ivan Skobstov singing "Danube, my Danube", are very well-known in the Soviet Union as vocalists of high musical stature, and excellent dramatic competency. In view of their participation on this recording, they tend to add a dimension of magnificent and expressive tonality to their rendition of these two songs.

The tone quality on this disc is superbly sonorous, and the display of its excellent sonic characteristics are immediately responsive to the listener's ear. This disc is recommended to those who would taste such a type of Russian vocalism, which could, undoubtedly, be considered a model for this variant of Russian folk-melodies of the descriptive character above indicated.

J.S. BACH: UNACCOMPANIED VIOLIN SONATAS AND PARTITAS, BWV 1001-6 (Yehudi Menuhin, violinist — Angel SC-3817 — 3 discs).

In 1720 Bach wrote three Sonatas and three Partitas for Violin solo, which count among the most powerful creations of his genius. Although the polyphonic treatment of the violin had been used in Italy, and particularly in Germany, before Bach's time, no other composer had written works of similar grandeur and magnificence for this instrument. Here the violin is used not so much as a singing-melody instrument, but as a carrier of harmonic and polyphonic expression. Bach, the great innovator, set himself the almost impossible task of writing ~~complex and complicated~~ harmonic expressions for a single and unaccompanied string instrument, with all of its technical limitations. This he achieved by making the utmost demands on the ability of the player, and at the same time taxing the imagination and perception of the listener to the very limit. While the performer can never present more than two notes simultaneously, Bach expects the arpeggios of 3 and 4 notes and even succession of notes to be understood as harmonic unities.

The composer's joy in experimenting and adapting certain stylistic devices to changed conditions had previously caused him to use features of violin technique in his keyboard compositions. Here the process is reversed, and he adopts basic designs of keyboard technique in his music for a stringed solo instrument. The organistic character of the Fugue in C of the Third Sonata is particularly noticeable; in a completely unprecedented manner it employs as theme a choral melody (Komm, heiliger Geist). The implied polyphony and the rich harmonic texture in these compositions have their counterpart in the painted architecture of the period, with its simulated colonnades and vistas.

It is characteristic that many movements from these Sonatas were subsequently transcribed for keyboard instruments. In all of these cases, the implied contrapuntal writing of the original was changed with the greatest of ease into a real polyphony.

As to form, the three Violin Sonatas all use the four movements of the Church Sonata (slow-fast-slow-fast) with a fugue in the second place and the slow inner movement as the only piece in a different key. On the other hand, the three Partitas, which in the autograph alternate with the Sonatas, show a great variety of dance forms. The first consists of 4 dances, each followed by a variation ('Double'); the third omits most of the standard movements and replaces them by free intermezzi in the manner of an orchestral suite. The second attaches, at the end of the series of dances, the famous Chaconne, which is longer than all the 4 preceding movements together and overshadows them in importance. It is an imposing set of variations on several, closely interrelated 8-measure themes, moulded into a powerful three-part form and imbued with dramatic power; possibly the most stirring example of the 'triumph of spirit over substance' Bach achieved in these works.

Yehudi Menuhin has lived with these unaccompanied violin sonatas and partitas of Bach since he was a small child and was termed "Master". He, therefore, is in a wonderful position to again re-record these works in the authentic stylistic and idiomatic manner that he has always displayed in his violinistic technique, particularly in the works of Bach.

His conception is scholarly and erudite, his interpretation is perceptive and soul-searching, and his rendition is artistry of the most astounding and compelling type. The grandeur, nobility, and majesty of these pieces are clearly brought out with conscious resolution, an exalted musical stamina, and a bravura embracing the finest elements in a technical diversity of large range. His wondrous glissandi, his long, beautiful, lyric bowing line and his exquisite arpeggi, glistening runs, and dazzling trills are just a few of the artifices that glamorize his exactness, precision, and authority. There are many fine violinists, such as Milstein, Szingar and Grumiaux who have recorded these works in a splendid manner, but, to this reviewer, Yehudi Menuhin will still remain the pre-eminent exponent of these unaccompanied works; first, because of his long and intimate involvement with these works; and, secondly, because of his deep comprehension, and almost incredible approach in their evolution and rendition. The tone quality of the violin is soft, warm, and richly sonorous. There are no harsh deviations or shrill effects. This set is most highly recommended as the work not only of a great interpretive artist, but also that of a man of deep humility and humanity, in his assertion of the dignity of Man in his artistic endeavors.

'The Web' at MPC

"THE WEB," a play to be presented at MPC next weekend, features Jocelyn Carol, Ramie Wikdahl, and Bob Colter.

"The Web," an original play by Peninsula writer Tom Edwards, will be given its premiere performance on Thursday (Oct. 7) on the main stage of the Monterey Peninsula College Theatre.

A drama of intrigue in a southern California setting, "The Web" is scheduled for a two-week run with performances at 8:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday (Oct. 8-9) and Wednesday through Saturday (Oct. 13, 14, 15 and 16).

The show is directed by Peter De Bono who asked Edwards to write a play for competition in next April's American College Theatre Festival in Washington, D.C. Edwards took his plot from a chapter in a novel on which he is working. Some of the occurrences are based on facts Edwards learned from police officers enrolled in an English class he once taught.

The plot involves a diplomat's daughter who invites eight persons to her luxurious Beverly Hills home, ostensibly for an extended "party" but actually for much different reasons. In the course of the gathering, the guests become emeshed in a web of baffling circumstances.

Edwards has been working with the MPC Players during rehearsals. The cast includes Sara Lyn Watts as the party hostess, Ramie Wikdahl, Robert Colter, Elaine Shrewsbury, Douglas Sebern, Dhav (sic) Dillard, David Drakos, Jocelyn Carroll and James Honroth as guests; George Hershey and Gertrude Chappell as servants.

General admission is $2.50 and $1.50 for students and military. For reservations call the Box Office after 5 p.m. at 375-0455.

Joe Regelski

If you're in the musical market for some fine keyboard work keep an eye on this column for the official announcement of the return of two fine pianists — Bob Dorrough and Boots Scobie.

Some of you may have caught Dorrough last year at Monterey Peninsula College. Bob is a musician's musician who has worked with many of the heavyweights in the musical world and has dabbled in composition now and then. The word is out that he'll be around for a few days at a Peninsula spot in mid October. Specifics soon.

Boots Scobie is that grand lady of the blues piano who has entertained many people in the area via the Royal Inn and Highway Robbery. She'll be back in the spotlight soon at a Monterey nightspot. Watch for that announcement. Boots has her own style as she cooks from everything from "Chicago" to Jim Webb's "MacArthur Park."

Cloudburst pianist Bob Phillips began work on a solo album at Monterey's Super Sound Studios last Sunday. Bob tells me he'll play everything from "old standards to songs the girl next door wants to hear." Bob is still deciding whether additional musicians will be on the tape.

If Phillips adds some people perhaps two will be guitarist Brad Bivens and percussionist Bill LePine — his fellow musicians in the Cloudburst unit that play at the Del Monte Hyatt House Monday through Saturday.

Those who had a chance to catch the guys at this year's Jazz Festival will attest to Bivens' fine feel for guitar — including a love for the classical genre which provides the audience with a musician who can add a touch of class when the tempo mellows or can get funky when it's time to dance at the Hyatt House lounge.

Bill LePine comes from a family of Chicago drummers. He's played at the Hyatt House for quite a while now and previously gigged with the Wave unit at the Hyatt which featured Sal Mercurio who now plays at the Casa Munras with his new group Nice 'N' Easy.

There is a fourth member of the group who helps the guys out during Cloudburst recording sessions. He's bassist Ray Drummond whom fellow musician Bivens calls "A real Bottom line player. Ray can hit those notes and reach down real low to grasp those chords that even Stanley Clarke has a hard time finding."

That concept of "bottom line playing" — of always searching for a note that the audience didn't realize was there — is what has made Cloudburst a mainstay at the Hyatt House.

Now that the overflow summer crowds are gone and there's a little breathing room on Cannery Row let me throw out these two suggestions for this weekend.

Jazz vocalist Len Dixon will provide you with a fine evening of solid vocals ranging from Cole Porter to Jacques Brel. He's ably backed by Woody and Bob Barr and conga player Robert Baker. Len's at the Captain's Cove.

The area's tightest rock unit — California — will be back at the Boiler Room this weekend. California lays down a solid dance beat and, at the same time, provides quite a few good jazz licks.

PORTUGAL and its people will be featured in the Oct. 7 and 8 performances of "Explorama," at Sunset Center.

Explorama features Portugal Oct. 7 &amp; 8

"Portugal," a new feature-length color travel-adventure documentary film, will be narrated in person by its producer, Chris Borden, as the opening event of the 1976-77 Explorama Series, which will again be presented at the Sunset Cultural Center Auditorium in Carmel. It will be screened at 8:15 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, October 7 and 8.

Borden's film of Portugal was shot on location in the six principal areas of that country and on the Island of Madeira. The film tells the story of the Portuguese people and their love of independence and thirst for adventure.

Other films in the series, all with in-person narration by their producers, will be "The People of Japan", Gene Wiancko, November; "Immortal Poland", Jonathan Hagar, January; "The Andes", Thayer Soule, February; "Serenade to Spain", Walter Sid Dodson, March; "Ageless India", Ken Wolfgang, April; and "Holland the Amazing Dutch", John Roberts, May. Each of the programs will be presented at 8:15 p.m. on Thursday and Friday evenings.

Reserved seat series tickets, single tickets and a brochure are available by writing Explorama, 609 Sutter Street, San Francisco 94102 or at Julia Marlowe box office in Carmel, 624-9446 and Abinante Music in Monterey, 372-5893.

Planners okay four restaurants

Use permits for four restaurants were issued at the Sept. 22 planning commission meeting, but only one new restaurant was among them.

Arne Poulsen, Charles Ober and Henry R. Marks all were granted their applications for a transfer of ownership for existing restaurants and Randall Fred was given the go-ahead to set up a new Chinese Restaurant in the location of Paulsen's Royal Danish Bakery.

Poulsen is moving to the west side of San Carlos Street, between 7th and 8th streets. Charles Ober will open "Charley-O's" in the location of the old Beefeater restaurant near the corner of Dolores and Ocean.

While use permits were swiftly granted the first three applicants, Marks had a more difficult time of it in getting permission to open a restaurant on the west side of Dolores, between Ocean and 7th streets.

Marks' original proposal was for a restaurant and cocktail lounge, but the land use committee report recommended that the cocktail lounge be deleted and that the operation be restricted to the serving of beer and wine. Trash disposal was also discussed.

When time came for Marks' sign approval, the commission decided that "Old Carmel Food and Beverage Co." was inappropriate for a number of reasons, and Marks was asked to resubmit his sign.

Taking Marks' sign literally, commissioners asked why his establishment should be called "Old Carmel" something. Had it been there a long time? No. And since they had already restricted Marks' operation to just beer and wine, the word "Beverage" was not completely accurate since it implied a wide variety of beverages, which Marks is not permitted to serve. The use of Food and Beverage Co. implied more a grocery store than a restaurant, commissioner Stephenson pointed out. Finally, it was suggested that the name might be banking on a recently formed organization in the city.

"Any comments from Old Carmel on this?" queried commissioner Robert Strum.

Three Penny opera

The 1931 film version of the "Three Penny Opera" (Dreigroschenoper) will be shown Sept 30 at 8 p.m. in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall.

The film is in German without subtitles. It was made on the eve of Hitler's seizure of power, by a band of Berlin artists who adapted the 1928 Bert Brecht-Kurt Weill stage triumph for the cinema. Brecht and Weill had freely adapted John Gay's "Beggar's Opera" for their musical, conjuring up a world of beggars, thieves, prostitutes and reprobate police, all led by Mack the Knife and his girl friend, Pirate Jenny.

Piano concert at MPC

An afternoon of modern music interpretations will be presented by concert pianist Elsbeth Heim on Oct. 3 at 2:30 p.m. in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall.

The concert is free and will include pieces by Lucia Alcala, Heinz Holliger, Hans Ulrich Lehmann, Howard Boatwright, Karlheinz Stockhausen, Roman Haubenstock-Romati and Rolf Urs Ringger. Works written especially for the artist by Lehmann and Ringger also will be performed.

A native of St. Gall,

Switzerland, Miss Heim received her Diplome de Virtuosite at the Lausanne Conservatory under Stierlin-Vallon and studied under the Parisians pianist and composer Emile Blanchet. She is known as a specialist in the interpretation of modern music and many works, especially those of Swiss composers, have given their first public performance by her.

She has given concerts in Germany, Italy, Belgium, Switzerland and Canada and in the United States in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Berkeley.

Norberg elected mayor 3-2

Gunnar Norberg was elected Carmel's new mayor at a special meeting held in the City Council Chambers Sept. 28.

Council members elected Norberg by written ballot with a vote of three to two. The voting followed the seating of newly appointed council member Helen Arnold.

"I've been on the City Council for 13 years, and this is a position I've been waiting to receive," Norberg declared in a quiet voice, as he accepted the mayor's position. He announced that he would be leaving the next day on a six-week tour, "for health reasons" and "for rest and relaxation." Norberg expressed complete confidence in David Hughes who will continue as vice-mayor and will serve as acting mayor in his absence.

Norberg said he would leave all standing committees as they are now, with the exception of appointing Helen Arnold to the public welfare committee, a position he held. Council members felt it prudent to re-elect the vice-mayor rather than just carry-over Hughes in the position. The vote for Hughes was unanimous and council members expressed their appreciation and satisfaction with him as they voted.

The mayor's position became vacant earlier in September when Eugene Hammond resigned, citing health and business reasons.

In a letter to the council, Hammond noted the pressures of the office combined with the amount of time the job of mayor was consuming, as key reasons for his resignation. He said he had, unfortunately, "learned the hard way that mine is not a personality suited to political life," and he would pass the job onto "others better qualified by nature to handle these pressures."

Hammond attended the special meeting, an indication that he is still interested in the activities of Carmel city government. He said, "It was nice to be here (at the meeting) on this side."

Hammond's resignation followed several controversies, including city employee disgruntlement and the move to save the Village Corner. Hammond felt that the pressures from these and the continual number of important issues arising daily created more pressure and time demand than he could handle. Hughes has served as acting mayor until the election Tuesday.

One regular attendee of council meetings expressed delight that this was the shortest council meeting he had ever attended. Councilman Mike Brown responded, "And remember it was chaired by Gunnar Norberg!"

HELEN ARNOLD was sworn in as the City Council's newest member Tuesday, Sept. 28

GUNNAR NORBERG was congratulated by Councilman Bernard Anderson after being sworn in as Carmel's new mayor.

Four-month moratorium declared

The Carmel City Council, playing to a near-empty house in Sunset Auditorium Sept. 30, declared a four-month building moratorium on Carmel's C-2 zone, and a four-month moratorium on the construction of all commercial buildings placed on sites larger than 16,000 square feet.

The moratorium, laxer than the blanket building moratorium originally discussed for the entire commercial district, will give the council time to study its zoning ordinances and come up with possible solutions to what has been termed Carmel's over-development.

The C-2 zone, now under a moratorium for construction of any kind, includes blocks on either side of Junipero, north of Ocean. This is the zone long recommended by Councilman Gunnar Norberg for resident-serving businesses only.

In its interim zoning ordinances, the council states as reasons for the action that "...the general public has expressed concern over the proliferation of commercial construction within the city..." and that "...the general public has expressed serious concern over the disappearance of businesses from the commercial district of the City which primarily provide goods or services for local residents..."

The ordinance also reiterates that the city is "primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential City wherein business and commerce have in the past, are now, and are proposed to be in the future subordinated to its residential character..."

Beginning the discussion on a building moratorium during the meeting, Councilman Gunnar Norberg described the city as being "sorely beset by one-day wonders," meaning tourists who come to Carmel for only a few hours and then leave, often by means of tour buses.

Norberg, whose ideas about the business district have been expressed in council meetings for years, once more outlined his proposals. Norberg asked for restricted use of the C-2 zone for resident-serving businesses only, a site size restriction for one building in the commercial district of 12,000 square feet, a density mechanism to limit the numbers of motels, restaurants and gift shops, and a multiple enterprise density restriction aimed at keeping out chain stores.

When the sparsely attended meeting was opened for public comment, former Councilman Olof Dahlstrand stood up to warn the council about the seriousness of instituting a moratorium.

Dahlstrand, who was on the council when the 1973 moratorium was put into effect, called a moratorium "an invitation to procrastination." Although he defended the moratorium of three years ago, he said that a true emergency does not now exist, that most of the matters the council was discussing could be solved in the planning commission.

Planning commissioner Dorothea Roberts affirmed that zoning downtown Carmel is "one of the main things we've studied," but she cited the complexities involved. Does the council want more small shops or apartments on a large scale, she asked. If the site size is reduced, land will be squeezed up and more small shops will appear. As far as chain stores go, Roberts pointed out that definitions are difficult. Carmel, for instance, has a small businessman with six shops — is that a chain operation, she asked.

Robert Little questioned the disappearance of resident-serving businesses, pointing out that Carmel has three grocery stores whereas the valley mouth has only two. He also said that while there may be only one barber left in Carmel, there are 16 hairstylists. He advised the council to think seriously before setting a moratorium.

Both Roland Scheffler and Herb Strausberger (representing Old Carmel) stood up to urge a moratorium. Strausberger asked for a one-year moratorium on C-2 and a four month moratorium on the rest of the business district.

Attorney Brian Finnegan, representing Maureen Kastor specifically, and the Carmel Property Owners Association in general, stood up to describe the city's many efforts to control growth during the 1970s. If there's development in Carmel people don't like, he said, it isn't because city government hasn't been diligent.

Decision due Nov. 1 in suit against city

After two and a half days in court, the suit against the city by Carmel City Employees Association rests with the judge — but a decision may not be reached before Nov. 1.

The suit, which charges the Carmel City Council with failing to negotiate in good faith with city employees regarding wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment, was brought before Judge Leo A. Deegan of Riverside the morning of Sept. 22.

The courtroom session continued all day Wednesday, Thursday and until noon on Friday. Judge Deegan, who has returned to Riverside, indicated he would hand down his decision on the matter no later than Nov. 1.

The Carmel City Employees Association, which does not include the police department or department heads, filed the suit after the city set a contract for fiscal year 1976-77 without reaching agreement with the association.

While policemen in the city also failed to reach agreement with the council, they did not file a similar suit.

Among the employees' grievances are the change in health insurance plans, the low — and in some cases nonexistent — across-the-board salary hikes, and the reclassification of employees, freezing some employees' salaries until they fall within the new salary range.

Under state law, the council may unilaterally set employee salaries and benefits if no agreement is reached between council and employees while bargaining in good faith. An arbitrator may be brought in only if both sides agree.

According to employee attorney Branner's statement, the meet and confer obligation must be met promptly on the request of either side, continuing for a reasonable period of time. Good faith requires "the parties to bargain with an open mind and sincere intention to reach agreement."

Although Branner admits that appointment of a mediator is commonly construed as being discretionary, he asserts that a mediator would properly be appointed in this case because the requirement that the city meet and confer in good faith was not met.

City attorney George Brehmer, acting on behalf of the council, states in his affidavit that the city strongly disagrees with the statement that the council did not meet and confer in good faith.

"The meet and confer sessions pursuant to the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act," Brehmer states, "took place more frequently and over a longer period of time than any other time in the history of the City according to my information and belief."

EIS contract awarded

In a special meeting Sept. 24, the Carmel Sanitary District voted to hire the firm of Sedway-Cooke of San Francisco to perform an Environmental Impact Statement for its Area-wide Facilities Plan.

The statement, which the Environmental Protection Agency suggested, will take between 12 and 18 months and probably cost between $125,000 and $150,000. The EPA must also approve the firm before an EIS is begun.

The area-wide facilities plan, which will take an overview of the sanitary disposal needs of this district, was made necessary by last year's designation of Carmel Bay as an Area of Special Biological Significance.

Monterey County Symphony begins school demonstrations

The Monterey County Symphony began its third season of in-school demonstrations this week, starting with the percussion section touring 38 schools throughout Monterey County.

Students from Carmelo and Woods School heard the demonstration last Wednesday at Carmelo School. Scott MacClelland narrated while Greg and Richard Janusz gave demonstrations of the timpani, conga drums, bass and snare drums, wood blocks, xylophone and glockenspiel, the cymbals and gong, and all the noise-makers used by the symphony orchestra in its performances.

At the end of last season the symphony completed a two-year project which brought the percussion, woodwind, string and brass sections of the orchestra separately to every fourth and fifth grade classroom in the county.

This year the project returns to the first half of the classes which now have new students in the 4th and 5th grades.

James Stefan, County Superintendent of Schools, and the County Board of Education support the project financially and have pledged $5,500 toward this season's program. The County Department of Parks and Recreation budgeted $2,000 towards the program, and Music Performance Trust Fund through Local 616 will contribute $1,500. The Monterey Jazz Festival and the Bing Crosby Youth Fund have also been steady contributors toward the

Books needed for sale

"Once again, we're appealing to you for books," says Mrs. George Purvis, president of the Friends of the Harrison Memorial Library. She said all donations are welcome and will be added to the surplus books donated by the library.

The annual used-book sale, sponsored by the Friends, is scheduled for Oct. 22 and 23 at the Carmel Masonic Temple, 7th and Lincoln. Sale proceeds are given to the library. In addition to the sale, the organization provides special services for the library.

Gifts made are tax-deductible at fair-market value. All categories of books are needed. Children's books have a particular appeal each year. Rare reference books draw local scholars and writers. Classics, history, biography, and technical books are also in demand. Fiction is one of the biggest attractions at the sale along with art books.

"We also need records, sheet music, prints, and paintings," Mrs. Purvis explains.

Gifts can be delivered to the Carmel library, located at Ocean and Lincoln. Or donations may be picked up, call 624-4629.

The demonstrations are supplemented by four "Concerts for Youth" in which the full symphony orchestra performs two concerts Thursday, March 10, 1977 at Pacific Grove Jr. High Auditorium, and two concerts Wednesday, March 16, 1977 at Sherwood Hall, Salinas for the same 4th and 5th grade students receiving the demonstrations.

Delightful recipes for chicken

Californians enjoy chicken this time of year especially. One of the classic favorites is economical Chicken Fricassee that provides a robust main course and tastes so fine on a coolish evening. Today's broiler-fryer, raised exclusively for the table and bred especially for plumpness, is a budget's best friend. Chicken is a wise buy in terms of nutrition also. Breasts have a higher protein content than red meats. Its chief virtue is that it tastes so good. When a tender fryer goes into the fricassee pot, the result is a dish a cook can crow over. (Excuse a bit of ribaldry.)

Chicken Fricassee: One broiler-fryer cut in serving pieces placed in saucepan or skillet with tight fitting lid. Add 2 cups water, 1 tsp. salt, speck of pepper and thyme with  $\frac{1}{4}$  diced Pascal celery. Bring to a boil. Cover, reduce heat and simmer 40 minutes. Mix 4 Tbsps. flour with  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup water until blended. Quickly stir into chicken mixture. Cook gently while stirring until thickened. Serve over hot cooked rice, noodles or split and buttered baking powder biscuits (they come frozen.) The above makes 4 servings. For a family dinner make several batches.

We like a fresh fruit salad with this. California Fruit Salad: Simmer one cup rose wine with 2-3 cup sugar, 1 tsp. grated lemon rind, 4 Tbsps. lemon juice and a fresh mint sprig about 5 min. Remove from heat adding salt to taste and another cup of rose. Cool and remove mint. Pour cooled syrup over fresh pineapple and papaya wedges, grapefruit, mandarin and orange sections, melon balls, strawberries, peeled, sliced firm bananas sprinkled with lemon juice to prevent discoloration. Cover and chill several hours. Arrange on individual plates with sherbet or cottage cheese as toppings.

From the wife of the protestant chief of Army chaplains comes this glamorized Army Chicken Divine: Coat 4 chicken breast halves with 2 Tbsps. seasoned flour. Brown in hot vegetable oil. Remove with spatula and put into brown paper bags to remove excess grease. Make a sauce of one bottle Sweet 'n Spicy salad dressing, the red kind; next add 1 cup water and 1 pkg. Lipton's onion soup mix. Simmer an hour, then pour over chicken and bake until cooked through.

Becky Heckert, the chaplain's wife, adds canned mushroom button caps for party occasions (both she and her handsome husband love to entertain) with sour cream and white wine added at one's own discretion. Really quite impressive and easy to assemble. Brown rice is the accompaniment or foundation with hot cornbread for Becky is a southern gal. They are currently stationed at Walter General Hospital in D.C. and have been at Fort Ord. Everyone admires these two not for religious reasons but because they are real human people.

Traditional southern cookery is getting a lively transfusion of new flavors nowadays. The greater frequency of foreign travel has intrigued Virginians since Jeffersonian times. New culinary adventures that still retain that special southern taste are still simmering on the old iron wood-burning stoves.

Mrs. Leroy P. Collins, who spent seven happy years in Carmel and is known affectionately as "Connie" to her many devoted friends here now lives in Powhatan, Virginia with husband General Collins. They have reconstructed a "gone with the wind" plantation to what is now the pride of the community. The imposing Colonial mansion with genuine southern hospitality.

Mrs. Collins has added that subtle nuance from their various tours of duty. Connie often serves melting pot luncheons for the ladies' guild at the parish of St. Lukes. One of this creative cook's specialties is:

Connie's Chicken Country Captain: Cut fringe fat from a 3 lb. fryer chicken instead of the old time large hen. Dredge cut chicken pieces in seasoned flour and brown in bacon fat. Saute 1 large chopped onion and 1 large sweet demembrated chopped green pepper in half a stick of butter. Add 1 tsp. curry powder, a pinch of thyme and paprika each; salt to taste with one large can peeled and seeded tomatoes. Add to chicken with a handful of currants, slivered almonds, minced fresh parsley and one mashed garlic clove. Simmer, covered, in baking dish at 300 F. oven until chicken is fork tender. Keep cover on and replenish liquid with dry white wine as needed. Add flour mixed with some of the liquid to form a smooth paste. This makes the nonfat sauce. Serve over dry white fluffy rice very steaming. On top add currants, almonds, minced parsley.

At her bridge luncheons Connie Collins simplifies everything by asking everyone to pour their own sherry. Little cheese niblets are nearby. The Country Captain is on the sideboard in chafing dishes along with separate ones for rice. Each to her own. General Collins in the meantime is busy trimming honeysuckle vines off his white picket fence. A change, the General told me, from picking off dried geranium leaves on Camino Real where they lived. Or raking.

News Briefs

PARENT DISCUSSION GROUP

A discussion group for parents of ninth grade students will be held Wednesday, Sept. 29, at Carmel High School at 7 p.m. The discussion will focus on the areas of conflict between parents and children and the participants will be encouraged to share their experiences (e.g. dating, use of the family car, etc.) with other parents. For further information, call Albert Galen at the Community Counseling Center, 373-4773.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art is seeking volunteers for the Museum on Wheels project to act as program aides when the traveling folk art exhibition visits schools in the Salinas Valley, San Benito and Santa Cruz counties.

Volunteers are asked to work two days per month and no special experience is needed since there is a wide variety of activities and many opportunities for various skills. For further information call Kay Cline at 372-5477.

CYSTIC FIBROSIS

This week volunteer marchers for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation's 1976 Breath of Life Campaign will be asking for contributions to help millions of children across the nation who suffer from lung-damaging diseases, according to Mrs. Virginia West, chairperson of the campaign for the Chapter in Carmel.

United Fund

Division chairmen named

Hal Hallett, chairman of the 1976-77 Monterey Peninsula United Fund campaign, has announced the five division chairmen who will help organize and activate this once a year donation drive.

Returning as chairman of the Advanced Gifts division is Mark Thomas, a Peninsula restaurateur and former hotel owner with an extensive career in civic involvement.

The new chairman for the Small Business division is D.R. "Red" Ohnstad, director of sales and Western Regional Manager for Watkins Products.

Ron Foster, the man who stepped in to chair the Corporate-Personnel division last year, is returning as chairman for that division. Foster has been a stockbroker for Dean Witter & Co. for the past year.

Clay Larson, Monterey Jaycees "Man of the Year", is undertaking the chairmanship of the Professional division. Vice President of Valley National Bank in Monterey and head of marketing for the bank, Larson has been involved in numerous civic activities.

Campaign chairman Hal Hallett is taking a new approach by acting as chairman for the Residential division. He says, "As chairman, I feel I should take an active position with the team. I am confident this year's drive will reach its $340,000 goal because of the enthusiasm of the division chairmen, and the generous support the community has shown in past campaigns."

The Monterey Peninsula United Fund drive will financially benefit fourteen local, non-profit agencies including the Alcoholism Council, Suicide Prevention Center, Family Service Agency, and Handicapped Activities Unlimited. This year's drive will also fund three projects: the Alliance on Aging, Monterey Youth Project, and Seaside Infant Care Center. The campaign will officially kick-off the last week in September and run into December.

BRIAN OSBORNE has been appointed general manager of Derek Rayne, Ltd., of Carmel. A native of England, Osborne has been with the company seven years, most recently serving as assistant general manager. He has a broad knowledge of traditional styling and materials and will be responsible for the operation of all the Rayne shops. Jon Blades will succeed Osborne as assistant general manager. Blades, formerly a member of the sales staff, has extensive training and experience in the merchandising of traditional clothing.

CBA meeting set Oct. 7

The Carmel Business Association will hold a breakfast meeting at 7:45 a.m., Oct. 7 at the La Playa Hotel. Membership will discuss the business community's view of Carmel.

The business district has an interest in Carmel and would like to make plans with the City Council to help solve problems that exist, according to Lee Chamberlin, executive secretary of the CBA.

Karate heads list of workshops

A new eight-week class in Karate will be among the short courses and workshops to be offered in October by Monterey Peninsula College Community Services.

The Karate class will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesdays, starting Oct. 20, according to Louise La Fosse, the instructor. It will be taught with the goal of developing discipline and confidence and will concentrate of self-defense tactics as well as exploring the art form and light sparring, she said. The registration fee is $10.

Among the workshops set for October are Wilderness Backpacking, Personal Development, Creative Design in Stained Glass and The Art of Meat and Fish Curing.

Wilderness Backpacking, a six-part workshop plus field trips which culminates in a two-day backpacking trip, will be held Tuesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning Oct. 12. It is directed by Corky Matthews.

Soft Sculpture, using cloth and fiber as a creative expression will be given by Elsbeth Ramos on Wednesdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m., starting Oct. 6.

Space is still available in a Personal Development class to be held Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Cheri Holyoak teaches the eight-week course that starts Sept. 30.

Two Saturday courses start Oct. 2. They are Creative Design in Stained Glass to be conducted by Anna Ballarian from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Creative Weaving to be taught by Berta Marquardt from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

The Art of Meat and Fish Curing will be taught by Francis Kalnay on Mondays, beginning Nov. 1, or Tuesdays, beginning Nov. 2.

Information on registration for these courses may be obtained by calling MPC Community Services at 373-5522.

Seaside wins 7-0

Padres lose second in a row

By ART BLACK, JR.

The Carmel High School Padre varsity football team lost its second game in a row and the second in the season for a 0-2 record last Saturday under sunny skies at Carmel's own Bardarson Field. The reason for the loss is as obvious as a penguin on the equator — the Carmel team's lack of understanding of the term "offense."

Carmel was lucky to lose by only 7 points as Seaside, a team known for its speed, failed at offense and only scored the one touchdown and PAT. Had the opponents been in their stride, Carmel would have been annihilated.

The only redeeming feature of the Padre afternoon was the defense, which almost won the game for the Padres, according to defensive Coach Charlie Davis, except that they were running more than normal and need more speed to cope with a team such as Seaside. According to Head Coach Jason Harbert, the Padres did an excellent job at defense, but the offense went begging as "the offense didn't get off well — we had breakdowns in assignments, and really need work this week on offense."

The only score in the game came in the third quarter when Nelson Makaiwi ran seven yards into the end zone for the touchdown.

It seemed to many observers of the game that the coaching staff overlooked the obvious talent on the field. Quarterback Guy DuBets tends to throw the ball away. Carmel has at its disposal two additional QBs, Tim Poehlmann (out of this game with a minor injury) and Steve Talley, a transfer student this year.

Also not playing last week because of minor injuries of one sort or another were Steve Speresky, Greg Miller and of course Poehlmann. All are expected to be in the lineup for tomorrow night's game against Live Oak High School in Morgan Hill, game time 4 p.m. for the Frosh, 6 for the JV's and 8 for the varsity Padres.

Junior Varsity

The Padre JVs were consistent in losing to Seaside 20-0 after their loss last week to Watsonville 20-0.

Seaside scored in the first, second, and fourth quarters.

For Carmel, John Lucido completed five of 16 passes for 42 yards, and Mark Nottenkamper was the leading receiver with a 37-yard gain on one reception.

Frosh

The Carmel Frosh defeated the Pacific Grove Frosh in a pre-season game last Saturday 22-6 in Pacific Grove.

Cherry Foundation to host workshop

A workshop to integrate techniques dealing with body, mind and spirit will be held at the Cherry Foundation Saturday Oct. 2 beginning at 9:30 a.m.

Gestalt therapist Dr. Ed Ross, musician John Roberts, who specializes in movement and t'ai chi chih, and spiritual psychic healer and teacher Dori D'Angelo will conduct the workshop.

Ross, who is interested in new ways of helping people grow, will cover psychotherapy. Roberts will focus on the body as part of the holistic approach to health, working with movement, t'ai chi chih and sound. D'Angelo known as "the Angel Lady" by her friends and associates, will focus on healing and man's spiritual nature.

The workshop will be under the sponsorship and direction of Mary Jane Hennessey. The hours are from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Tea and coffee will be provided and it is suggested that you bring a sack lunch for two meals, lunch and supper, and a blanket and a pillow. Workshop fee is $12 and there is no need to pre-register. Persons interested in attending should come to the Cherry Foundation, north west corner of 4th and Guadalupe, in Carmel.

Helen Arnold...

She feels increases in city staff have often been necessary in the past, but agrees with the intent of reducing the work force by attrition. "I think the basic theory is good. Whether it's workable or not I'm not prepared to say. We need a certain increase in staff on the beach, for instance, because people misuse the beach. The amount of money that's been appropriated for beach cleanup has had to be increased because of larger usage. That's an inescapable reality."

Arnold, above all, stresses she has a lot to learn about issues confronting the council. She doesn't feel she knows enough yet to discuss the budget and its ramifications, the question of a city manager or what direction the council should go in when replacing the retiring city administrator, Hugh Bayless. But she does know what she wants to accomplish and that is the preservation of the qualities of Carmel life. In accordance with that, she favors city action to insure the preservation of Carmel landmarks.

But too much city involvement in daily life has its drawbacks as well. "There are some rural aspects to this community that are preserved perhaps by a lack of city services. I don't think there are many people who quarrel with this."

Arnold admits Carmel has changed a great deal over the years since she first came here. Some change, she seems to feel, is inevitable. But she is still amazed by people who come to Carmel because of its uniqueness and then immediately try to change it.

"Lots of people have come here to retire. They come here because it has a rural feeling, because it was beautiful and yet, in some cases, the first thing they want to do is change it to like (the place) where they came from, with curbs and gutters, street lights and directional signs. But this is not what attracted them here in the first place if they'd stop to realize that."

"I know of one particular instance of someone who came here and thought that it was lovely and rural and, my goodness, you could ride horseback here. Then after they moved here, they started to complain about the stables. But they lose sight of the fact that these are the things, maybe not specific instances, but this is the feeling of Carmel that brought them here."

"If we leap into changing all of those things right away, they might just as well not have moved here from wherever they came from."

Arnold statement

Editor's Note: Following is the prepared statement distributed by Helen Arnold Tuesday, Sept. 28, upon being sworn into office.

I appreciate the confidence placed in me by my appointment to the Council, keeping in mind that I have not been elected by what I now find to be my constituency. Nevertheless, I feel a strong obligation to represent my fellow citizens and will do so to the best of my ability.

We do face problems, but they are not new ones. Some have been coming on for 40 or 50 years. We must, especially now, do our utmost to find ways to cope with what has become an actuality.

Every issue will be researched thoroughly and I will not cast a vote until I feel confident that I have done that.

It is to be hoped that on the many serious issues facing us in the future, a consensus can be reached. I think this was done admirably by the last two Special Meetings of the Council.

Helen Emmons Arnold

Council to delay action on Sunset gym, field

The Carmel City Council will set a date in November for discussing disposition of the Sunset gym and the north parking lot at its Oct. 5 meeting, but little discussion is expected Tuesday night.

The gym and parking lot, along with the Boy Scout House, will be set for a joint study session of the council and the cultural commission sometime after Mayor Gunnar Norberg returns in six weeks.

Also on the agenda of the first regular October council meeting will be planning for the replacement of retiring city administrator Hugh Bayless.

The council's ordinance buses will come up for a final reading, and consideration will be given for leasing land at the mouth of Carmel Valley for the parking of tour buses. An ordinance for traffic control on Scenic Drive will be introduced, aimed at eliminating tour buses and other heavy vehicles from that road.

The planning commission vacancy left by newly appointed Councilwoman Helen Arnold will be discussed.

The council additionally plans to clarify the intent of its recently imposed building moratorium for the city's C-2 zone which includes the blocks on either side of Junipero, north of Ocean.

Out on a limb

By GREGORY D'AMBROSIO
City Forester

A year of drought is also a year when insect populations reach extremely high levels. A few insect problems that you, as a tree owner should be aware of, will be discussed. Bark beetles that attack your pine trees are of major concern. A description of this insect pest has been printed by the Pine Cone several times and copies can be obtained from the Public Works Department.

Oak moths are also beginning to affect trees over an extensive area. Be aware of this insect's presence, if your trees begin to exhibit bare spots in the upper canopy, the oak moth caterpillar is probably feeding. At this stage spraying is recommended. Due to drought conditions, damage can be more severe than during a normally wet season. Preventing any unnecessary shock due to loss of foliage will probably help your oaks more than any other maintenance that you normally provide. An oak experiencing severe drought conditions is not often in immediate danger of dying, however, when a tree is completely defoliated and is forced to provide new flush growth, the combination of drought and new growth production under stress can be very serious. Watch for these small gray green caterpillars and prevent any damage by means of a spray application.

Cypress bark moths have caused us problems in the past. Again, during drought periods, damage from these insect pests are at serious levels. If your Cypress trees show signs of yellowing or you see reddish sawdust lodged in the crevices of the tree's bark plates, your tree is probably infested. This particular insect has not been a problem over the past several years, but in drought situations, Cypress are vulnerable to severe infestations. Immediate preventative measures to protect your trees are essential. Any information or questions on these insect problems will be answered by calling 624-3543.

The village of Carmel should be proud of the new park that is being developed on the Doolittle-Flanders property. Approximately eight weeks ago, the city ordered the Public Works Department, streets and forestry division, to begin clearing fire trails so that the Carmel Fire Department would have access for fire protection. The trails were developed in conjunction with proposed hiking trails so that the least amount of clearing would be required. Park benches have been installed, and the graded trails have been covered with wood chips from our own stock piles. The atmosphere is pleasing to the eye and the natural wooded feeling has been maintained throughout the park. In the months to come, work will continue and by next spring all initial plans for the park will be completed. A hearty thanks should be given the City Council, especially Mayor Gene Hammond, and to the employees who worked on this project.

Old Carmel elects slate of officers

Arthur Strasburger Jr. was named chairman of the recently formed Old Carmel group at a meeting of organizers and committee heads held Sept. 23. Frank Lloyd was appointed co-chairman and Leslie Gross was designated executive director.

Strasburger is a native Californian who first came to live in Carmel at the age of 10. He was in the first graduating class at Carmel High School and then attended Stanford University. During World War II he served in the Army Air Corps. In 1947 he returned to Carmel to work for Carmel Realty Company, then headed by Corum Jackson. He later was employed by Encyclopaedia Britannica. In 1957 he returned to Carmel Realty and on Corum Jackson's death in 1963, he became co-owner of that firm.

Old Carmel was prompted into being in August of this year when concerned citizens reacted to threatened extinction of the Village Corner, for many years a favorite restaurant meeting place for the town residents. The organization now may be reached at Post Office Box 3344, and by telephone at 624-8000.

Public Notices

ORDINANCE NO. 76-20 INTERIM ZONING ORDINANCE FOR THE C-2 DISTRICT

WHEREAS, the general public has expressed concern over the proliferation of commercial construction within the City, and,

WHEREAS, the general public has expressed serious concern over the disappearance of businesses from the commercial district of the City which primarily provide goods or services for local residents; and,

WHEREAS, it has long been established that, "The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea is... primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential City wherein business and commerce have in the past, are now, and are proposed to be in the future subordinated to its residential character..."

NOW, THEREFORE, THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. That, under the provisions of Sections 65858 et seq. of the Government Code of the State of California, the City Council hereby establishes the following temporary regulations:

a. That during the term of this ordinance no change in uses shall be allowed in the C-2 District.

Section 2. Statement of Urgency. This ordinance is an urgency ordinance, under the provisions of Section 65858 of the Government Code of the State of California. Its adoption is required for the preservation of the public peace, health and safety, in that the City proposes to consider enacting changes in the present C-2 Zone regulations. These changes, it is deemed, are needed urgently to provide for businesses to primarily serve local residents. The City Council therefore adopts this ordinance to avoid the frustration of the purpose of the proposed changes during the interim period of study, and to prevent unfair economic advantage to any persons able to make developments in these areas at this time.

Section 3. Exemptions. Projects approved by the Planning Commission prior to 23 September 1976 are exempted from the provisions of this ordinance.

Section 4. Effective Date. As an urgency ordinance, this ordinance shall become effective immediately and shall terminate four (4) months from this date, January 23, 1977, unless extended as provided by law.

PASSED AND ADOPTED by the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea this 23rd day of September, 1976, by the following roll call vote:

Architecture designed by Kip Stewart, this unique, artistic home is now being offered. Some of its special features are an 18 foot high cathedral beamed huge living room, with french doors opening to a lovely enclosed garden and a very private patio. There are also three bedrooms — two with ocean view — and a huge deck off the Master bedroom featuring an outdoor redwood tub and sauna. A formal dining room with atmosphere — and picture window — where privacy is assured by the lush foliage of surrounding trees, a bright, colorful kitchen AND — A ROOM AT THE TOP OF THE STAIRS — "The Crows Nest" we call it — with a sweeping unsurpassed view from Cypress Point to Point Lobos!! A room for many needs — to enjoy — to get away from it all — to meditate! A very special residence — for very special people!! OUR EXCLUSIVE $225,000.

Between the Mission and the Ocean

In walking distance to world famous Carmel Beach, situated on a spacious corner lot, we are offering this very impressive, tremendous, only eight year old, quality built home. There are 4 bedrooms, 3 full baths plus guest bathroom and a large family style kitchen. Elegant living room extending into large dining room, offering custom shutters on all windows and a cozy fireplace. One bedroom and bath downstairs is ideal for live-in help. There is also a huge finished double garage and large patio. Priced to sell at $139,500. You must come and see this great home for yourself.

Sunny Carmel Valley With Fabulous Views

Located off prestigious Tierra Grande just a short drive up the hill, we are offering a beautiful ranch style home with never ending views of the valley floor to the blue Pacific Ocean. Well landscaped grounds feature a new automatic sprinkler system that keeps the green green grass in mint condition. The large side yard is level and a swimming pool could be added for the crowning touch. This area also has fantastic views of the Carmel Valley hills. Inside there are features too numerous to mention, such as Cathedral beamed ceilings in the living room and dining room and skylights throughout. Three bedrooms and two beautiful baths make this one of our outstanding values at only $107,600.

@ "Natural" House

For a sunny hilltop overlooking Del Monte Forest, Architect-Builder George Muennig created a three-level innovative design to fit a sloping site, then assembled a group of skilled craftsmen to carefully transmit his imaginative ideas into a "natural" house combining hand-crafted woods, glass and tile, also special lighting, window and bathroom treatments.

Inside the stained glass front door, a flight of steps leads up to the living room with a freestanding brass fireplace and forest views framed by floor to ceiling glass. Patterned beams and oak floors add interesting detail. Also on this floor are a studio (or bedroom) and one of three fascinating bathrooms. On the other two levels are the dining room with circle window, the kitchen with appliances blended into natural wood cabinets (both have tile floors) and two bedrooms and baths. The separate garage is designed to complement the house.

Quality workmanship, seldom seen today, and finest materials, equally rare, are the keynotes of this truly entrancing house.

Cypress Swim Club offers sync lessons

A free opportunity to learn the basic fundamentals of AAU competitive synchronized swimming is being offered to female swimmers of the Monterey Peninsula between the ages of 8 and 16.

Four weeks of free instruction, taught by the coaching staff of the award-winning Cypress Swim Club, are being conducted at various pools on the Peninsula. Interested swimmers are asked to register by telephoning Mrs. Douglas Pease at 659-4720 or Mrs. Sherwin Friedman at 649-0519.

The Cypress Swim Club is a non-profit educational youth group coached by Donn Squire, former Men's Sr. National AAU Solo Champion; Carol Dentch, formerly a coach in Florida; and Del Neel, National AAU Officials' chairman for synchronized swimming.

Serving on a volunteer basis these three have coached local synchronized swimmers to the position of the eighth-ranked team in the country at the Sr. National AAU Championships in Houston, Texas earlier this year. They will be assisted by regional and national champions in the free training sessions offered three times weekly.
